Introduction

The purpose of this document is to map the provincial/territorial departments responsible for programs/services regarding Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder (FASD), as well as strategic plans and awareness campaigns across Canada.

What is Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder?

FASD is a diagnostic term used to describe impacts on the brain and body of individuals prenatally exposed to alcohol. FASD is a lifelong disability. Individuals with FASD will experience some degree of challenge in their daily living, and need support with motor skills, physical health, learning, memory, attention, communication, emotional regulation, and social skills to reach their full potential. Each person with FASD is unique and has areas of both strength and challenges<sup>1</sup>.

FASD Prevalence Across Canada

Researchers currently estimate that at least 4% of the population of Canada has FASD, which translates to more than 1.5 million people. FASD is often underrecognized and identified, leading to the possibility that prevalence estimates are conservative<sup>2</sup>.

Provincial & Territorial Strategies

The unique complexities of FASD support the need for a provincial and territorial approach to addressing the needs of people with FASD and their families. There are currently some provinces that have an operating strategy or framework in place to address FASD. However, many are out of date, indirectly refer to FASD, or do not explicitly refer to FASD<sup>3</sup>.

The following document outlines the current state of strategic plans and awareness campaigns across Canada to highlight where strategic plans and FASD specific supports are needed.

British Columbia

Provincial Department Lead: Ministry of Children and Family Development

- Mandate: “The Ministry of Children and Family Development’s primary focus is to support all children and youth in British Columbia to live in safe, healthy and nurturing families and be strongly connected to their communities and culture”

FASD Related Mandates	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. B.C.’s 10-year plan, Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder: Building on Strengths (2008-2018) was built on B.C.’s original FASD strategic plan released in 2003, which was the first of its kind in Canada. Updates to the plan are pending the completion of system transformation in the Ministry of Children and Family Development (MCFD) which is aimed at providing strong and responsive supports to all children and youth with support needs and their families.</li> <li>2. MCFD is piloting a new service delivery approach for children and youth with support needs, including those with FASD, and their families. The pilot approach provides children, youth and families with supports and services based on functional need rather than diagnosis. While piloting this new approach in four communities, data will be collected to evaluate the approach and understand what works best for families. During this time the ministry will also be engaging with families, service providers, advocates, experts, those with lived experience, First Nations and Indigenous People to inform a new system of supports for children and youth with support needs.</li> <li>3. In Budget ’23 MCFD increased supports to children and youth with confirmed or suspected FASD by: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a. doubling the budget for the FASD Key Worker Program, resulting in education and support to 2,500 additional families and caregivers of children and youth with confirmed or suspected FASD</li> <li>b. providing a $250,000 grant to Inspire Kids FASD Support Society of B.C. to help them extend their reach and continue to provide invaluable support to families of children and youth with FASD in B.C.</li> <li>c. awarding the Vancouver Foundation $2.76 million in grant funding to extend respite services to families of children and youth with FASD.</li> </ol> </li> <li>4. British Columbia is a member of the Canada Northwest FASD Partnership</li> </ol>
